Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year!

Our Casualties On The Home Front

Traffic Accidents Still Account For Large Number Of Deaths In State Of North Carolina; Every Citizens In The State Should Feel It Their Personal Duty To Help Eliminate Accidents On Our Highways And In Our Streets

"A safe Christmas on the home front should be the interest of every citizen as the season of increased travel and additional winter highway hazards approaches", declared Ronald Hocutt, Director of the North Carolina Highway Safety Division, recently.

"As the Christmas season approaches, when North Carolinians strive to keep alive the traditions our sons are fighting to preserve—we must all feel a deep concern in keeping ourselves and others alive for this Christmas and other Christmases in a better world", Mr. Hocutt continued.

"Gold Stars in many homes attest the sacrifice of life that has already been made on the battlefronts to preserve our Nation—but there are no Gold Stars for the more than 700 traffic deaths on our highways this year. The pity of this death toll on our highways is its uselessness. Traffic accidents are preventable and serve no purpose—but defeat."

"The call of our Country on the home front is to conserve and produce. Every hour lost from injury or death in accident is lost in production. Every vehicle damaged or demolished is lost to conservation and transportation."

"The December fatality rate on our highways is high and unless it is stopped, what Yuletide happiness can emerge from a background of war, will yet be shadowed in many homes by highway casualties on the home front."

"North Carolina must reduce the accidents on the highways—must decrease the deaths and injuries and the destruction of property. Public sentiment can create an atmosphere of disapproval of careless and reckless driving and an appreciation of those who observe the laws of safety and show a proper regard for the rights of the travelling public."

"I urge every motorist, every citizen, to put forth every effort to make this Yuletide Season a safe one", concluded Mr. Hocutt.

Revolution Scouts Have Christmas Party

The Revolution Scouts enjoyed their Christmas party, Wednesday evening at the welfare department. Decorations made the room gay, where they were enjoyed lead by Miss Elizabeth Ann Rhodes. Gifts were exchanged and opened. Hot chocolate, Christmas cookies and candies were served. All of the Scouts with the exception of one who was sick were present.

Funeral Services Held For George R. Harris

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock at the Church of God, State street, for George Randall Harris, 77, who died last Saturday night at the home of his son, George A. Harris, 914 Grayland street. Rev. C. E. Richards, pastor, was in charge of the services, and interment was in Proximity cemetery.

A native of Montgomery county, Mr. Harris had made his home in Greensboro for the past 31 years. He had been seriously ill for a month.

He leaves four sons, J. T., John L., George A. and Samuel Z. Harris, all of Greensboro; two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Nelson and Mrs. James Caviness, both of Greensboro; also 31 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

RECENT ARRIVALS IN OUR MIDST

Mr. and Mrs. David Long, 1307 Maple street, Proximity, announce the birth of a daughter.

Mrs. W. E. Owen Passes At White Oak

Final rites were held Monday morning at 11:00 o'clock at Sixteenth Street Baptist church for Mrs. W. E. Owen, 66, who died Saturday at 10:00 a.m. at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Shores, 1415 Seventeenth street, White Oak. The pastor, Rev. Wade H. James, was in charge, and was assisted in the service by Rev. Harold Loman and Rev. Troy Vaughn. Burial followed in the Shiloh church cemetery in Randolph county.

A native of Randolph county, Mrs. Owen had resided in the Rankin community for 26 years. She had been in declining health for two years and had been unable to leave her bed since Thanksgiving day. She was a member of Antioch Christian church, Randolph county.

She leaves her husband, W. E. Owen, six sons, O. M., D. L., J. T., W. E., M., C. E. and J. B. Owen, and two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Shores and Mrs. P. M. Cockman, all of Greensboro; two brothers, Cicero Fox, Randolph county, and Fields Fox, Hartford, Ala.; 18 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Pallbearers were: F. E. Strickland, A. Cockman, Lacy Allred, D. D. Michael, Lewis Shores, and Vernon Owens.

Gloves Are Used By Lamp Division

The Westinghouse Lamp Division which is producing electronic equipment for the armed forces finds it necessary to adopt many of the precautions of a hospital. Clean white cotton gloves issued daily to some workers are worn so that no moisture from the hands can touch the delicate tube parts. In addition the laboratory is completely air-conditioned and humidity-controlled. For some jobs only one glove is received and for others none at all. To avoid the problem of matching pairs, a glove is used which will fit either hand. About 10,000 gloves every month are needed. Exclusion of moisture or dust is of extreme importance. A tiny particle of moisture on a tube part causes greases. When the tube is heated, the grease "cooks" away, leaving particles of dirt which might interfere with efficient operation.

STILL PLAYING POLITICS

What's wrong with Washington and the war? Maybe an OPA high official summed it all up in one sentence when he said recently:

"Business must hold its nose and take its medicine." There it is in a nutshell. The New Dealers in the midst of a bitter war still think the business of government is the fight on business. The author of this revealing statement hasn't found out that it isn't big business that is being hurt by OPA. It is the housewife; the fixed-salary, white-collar worker; the farmer; the retailer in competition with OPA's "black market" bootleggers; the little business man who is being bled white.

And the young legalists go on writing directives and hurling challenges at industry.

While industry goes on turning out the tanks and airplanes that give the New Dealers all they can point to with pride.

W. O. Community Club Has Christmas Party

At the White Oak Community club Christmas party Monday night, Rev. B. A. Sisk, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, conducted the devotional and later read a beautiful Christmas story. Christmas music was rendered by J. Frank Pickard and two young ladies. Coconut cake and coffee were served by the hostesses, of whom Miss Lillian Tilley was chairman.

On the threshold of 1944 it may be appropriate to envision a better world... a world which shall let all nations dwell in peace and safety, and which will afford the assurance that all men may live out their lives unafraid of further wars and troubles. May God speed that day, is our prayer, as we send you our wishes for a Merry Christmas this year.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Henson, of 1910 Poplar street, have received word that their son, Sgt. James Henson, is stationed somewhere in China with the Fourteenth Division of the air force. Sgt. Henson has just been assigned to a Bomber Squadron.

Health-Recreation Department News

That race degeneracy has progressed to an almost unbelievable degree in this country is made clear by the results of over 9,000,000 draftees. Thirty percent of the boys eighteen years of age were rejected as unfit for military service. At the age of twenty-one the percentage turned down reached forty percent, and of those who had reached thirty-six years of age (when they should have been in their prime, seventy percent were regarded as unable to perform the duties of a soldier. Eighty percent of men forty-five years of age were also rejected.

The facts brought out by these examinations show conclusively that the average young man of today instead of following a program which will promote his health, add to his physical powers, and increase his life expectancy is doing the very reverse, pursuing a regime which overworks and prematurely wears out his vital organs, promotes disease and shortens his length of days.

The late Dr. Harvey Kellogg has many times called attention to the great decline in the last half century in the physical and mental fitness of the American people, and now the indications of race degeneracy are becoming so marked that many writers are discussing this grave question which it is hoped may soon become a matter of public concern.

We do not believe that a nationwide interest in sports and athletics with regular participation will be sufficient to re-establish our health deficiency. On the contrary, an overzealous interest and participation to the point of over-taxing one's physical abilities will serve to hinder one's physical progress. So many of our young men enter sports for sport's sake rather than for the benefit they might derive through play and exercise. It seems to the writer that the people of our nation as a whole have got to become more health minded before we can make much progress on the road back to a strong and healthy people.

The results in the boys basketball league for Saturday morning, December 18, was as follows:

The Havocs defeated the Marauders at Proximity 33 to 22. The Liberators set the Avengers back 17 to 12. This game was at Proximity also. At the White Oak Y. the Aiacobras downed the Thunderbolts 22 to 16, and the Mustangs won over the Warhawks 19 to 14. All these were closely contested games and the boys are showing a marked improvement in their passing and team play.

The lineups were: for the Havocs, T. Seawell and F. Austin, forwards; B. Patterson, center; and R. Billow and T. Russell, guards. Marauders: C. Austin and J. Scott, guards; D. Elkins, center; B. Thornburg and W. Leonard, forwards. Liberators: B. Faircloth and D. Kincaid, forwards; Wade, center; K. Land and D. Maness, forwards.

Give War Bonds For New Years Presents

The old saying that a man is only worth what he saves is very true indeed. After this war is over and a period of depression comes (if it does) then what a man has saved before will increase in value to him then. During this time of year we are all giving presents to our relatives, friends and others. Why not make the New Year begin right by giving War Bonds for presents to your family. In years to come they will look back through the years and be very glad indeed.

On Friday night the Business Girls' club was entertained at a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Taylor Turner in Cannon Court apartments.

A Christmas tree, red candles and holly made the living room take on a festive atmosphere. After the guests arrived, letters were written to Santa Claus, in which many "Queer" things and persons were asked for. Pollyanna and "Secret Pal" gifts were opened.

Miss Helen Lefler, bride-elect of New Years' Day, was presented gifts of crystal and china in her chosen patterns from the club. Ice cream, decorated cakes, coffee, and homemade mints were served. Members present were: Misses Marjorie Moore, Becky Moore, Mateline Phillips, Alene Phillips, Naomi Lovette, Mattie McIntyre, Sadie Garner, Gladys Garner, Marion Barber, Lib Sink, Hope Thornburg, Polly Armfield, Mable Starling, Doris Lucas, Helen Wrenn, Inez Stone, Helen Lefler, Grace Steele, Mesdames Tommy Moss, Frank Graves Jr., L. W. McFarland Jr., Frank Starling, Jack Marshall, Taylor Turner, and Mrs. Russell Pratt, formerly Mary Louise Thacker, was a visitor.

Final Rites Held For Mrs. Mary Maye

Last Sunday afternoon at 4:00 p. m. at the residence of Earl Caviness, 1317 Cone Court, final rites were held for Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Maye, 69. Mrs. Maye died Saturday at 3:00 a.m. at the residence after an illness of two weeks.

Rev. J. H. Smith, pastor of Eller Memorial Baptist church, of which Mrs. Maye was a member, officiated, and was assisted by Rev. R. C. Gofforth, pastor of Proximity Methodist church. Interment was in Proximity cemetery.

Pallbearers were: E. R. Patterson, R. G. Stanley, George Stanley, Buck Butler, Glenn McDonald and Bruce Shropshire.

Mrs. Maye was a native of Orange county, but had made her home with her grandson here for 23 years. She had resided in Guilford county for the last 27 years.

Surviving in addition to Earl Caviness are 10 other grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren and two nephews.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our many deepest appreciation to our many friends for their expressions of sympathy and kindness during the recent death of our son, Staff Sgt. Jesse O. Wheeler, Jr., who was killed in action over Kiel, Germany, July 29, 1943.—Mr. and Mrs. Jesse O. Wheeler and family.

Peace and Tolerance

We fortunate people, living in a country free from the dangers of bombs and shells, should bow our heads in deep reverence during this Christmas holiday. We are indeed the most fortunate people on earth, even though many of our loved ones are suffering and enduring the hardships of war.

Even they are probably faring better than any other men in the armed services in the world, for it is generally recognized that they are better fed and better clothed. We feel assured that on Christmas day at least a part of that spirit which has each year permeated the people of this nation will also to some degree be felt by them.

Despite transportation difficulties, for many months our brave boys have been receiving "Do Not Open Until Christmas" packages, and those in charge of military affairs will, no doubt, wherever and whenever possible, see that our boys are conscious of Christmas day in many ways.

Few indeed are those who are fortunate enough to be citizens of the United States who do not have a feeling of reverence and thankfulness on Christmas day. Christmas assuredly lends itself to closer ties and brotherly love; and even though the greatest battles of all times are being waged, Christmas still lights up the hope of peace on earth and good will among men.

As we permit ourselves to take counsel of ourselves during this holiday season, we should not overlook the fact that our first and most important duty at this time is to do our individual parts in helping to win this war and win it as early as possible so that soon again peace and good will can be restored and that our friends and loved ones who are now engaged in the hazardous job of fighting can be brought back to share with us the safety and privileges of a democratic people.

As we see it, we can each more nearly meet the demands of this Christmas season by solemnly pledging ourselves to a whole-hearted dedication of our best efforts in promoting our mutual cause; that is to say, in bringing this war to a rapid, successful conclusion;—for after all, Christmas stands for peace and good will, and it is only by unconditionally defeating the enemy that we can bring peace and good will.

We, therefore, in bringing this, our Christmas message and our best wishes for the New Year, urge every reader to more sympathetically seek to understand the problems of others that we can mutually cooperate in promoting the spirit of Christmas by helping to bring victory as soon as possible. Again, we say, may the spirit of Christmas prevail everywhere, and we might add, even among our enemies so that they may see the light and recognize that their cause of tyranny, sacrilege and persecution is an error and that their only hope for the future is to lay down their arms and humbly dedicate themselves to a future life of peace and tolerance.

ALL ON THE JOB TOGETHER

Reading & Writing

by Edwin Seaver & Robin McKow

"The battlefield was an incongruous thing. Always there was some ridiculous impingement of normalcy on a field of battle. There on that day it was the Arabs. They were herding their camels, just as usual. Some of them continued to plow their fields. Children walked along, driving their little sack-laden burros, as tanks and guns clanked past them. The sky was filled with planes and smoke burst from screaming shells."

Now that the North African campaign is over, a number of excellent books are coming out to give us an all-over picture of this dramatic period in the war's history. One of the best is "Here Is Your War" by Ernie Pyle, from which the above is quoted. Ernie Pyle is an A-1 correspondent, and he writes with an eye for detail, a sense of humor, and an understanding heart.

Among the many dramatic stories is the one about the crippled Fortress that came in on two engines at sunset, after all the airfield had given up hope for her. "All of us stood tense," writes Ernie Pyle, "hardly remembering anyone else was there. With all our nerves we seemed to pull the plane toward us. I suspect a photograph would have shown us all leaning slightly to the left. Not one of us thought the plane would ever make the field, but on it came—so slowly that it was cruel to watch."

Ernie Pyle landed first in Oran, and there he was witness to the American soldiers' really amazing gift of fraternization. They got along even if they didn't know a word of French or Arabic. "A really comic sight was one of our boys standing on the street with an English-French dictionary in his hand, talking to a girl and looking up each word as he spoke it."

Among the most welcome visitors in North Africa, says Mr. Pyle, were the four stage and screen stars—Carole Landis, Mitzi Mayfair, Kay Francis and Martha Raye—who arrived under the auspices of the USO. He is full of praise for the bravery and fortitude of these girls. "They had heard bombs fall, and they knew about army stew. They averaged four hours' sleep a night. . . . To say they were appreciated is putting it mildly." Incidentally, Carole Landis has just completed the story of the tour she made with her three companions. Titled, "Four Girls in a Jeep," it will appear first in the Saturday evening Post, and later as a book.

1. Yes,—but remember boys have their own personality. They retain a nutty flavor and do not pick up the flavor of food with which they are combined. You can substitute them in navy bean recipes, too.
2. Dried peaches make a good candy. To ½ pound of dried peaches add ¼ cup of water and steam in a double boiler over a top gas burner. After you have drained, cooled, and dried them on a kitchen cloth, cut them into thin strips and roll in granulated sugar. They'll make a hit with everyone!
3. Scour well, then wash and dry thoroughly. Spread melted vegetable oil or shortening over atomal. Do not use any fat containing salt. Then place pot in oven set at 250-300° F. Or place on top of gas range burner using a low flame. Wipe off excess fat with paper toweling. Repeat the process—and be patient!

Aunt Matilda was helping me with the dishes the other night, and we were talking, as usual, about the war news—especially the growing casualty lists. "It's just terrible," Auntie exclaimed, jabbing the towel into one of my best tumblers as if she were stabbing a Jap.

"And for what?" she continued grimly. "In another generation they'll be at it all over again. All these babies being born—just to be sacrificed." "I'm not so sure, Aunt Matilda," I put in quickly. "No, I'm not at all sure that we'll have to go through this nightmare again. There are some pretty hopeful signs this time."

"Don't forget," I went on, "that there are a lot of men in the world—especially in our America—who fought in the last war and whose sons are fighting now. Why, think of all the men like that we know right here in town! And those men aren't going to have their sons' sons fighting a third World War if they can help it."

"Just the other day, for instance, I noticed that a hundred business leaders of this country have come out for a world organization for peace. Seems to me the paper said they'd been studying the problem for the last year! They're the Postwar Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers."

"Now those men are business men, and pretty important ones, in their plants—but at home they're just fathers, crazy about their youngsters and planning what they'll do when they grow up."

"Don't you suppose those fathers are going to do everything they possibly can to prevent another war?"

History of National Socialism from their origins, is reported to be a lengthy and authoritative work that has all the fascination of a novel.

Coats of Warm Cotton Brave Wintry Blasts

People who think of cottons as just summery dresses are 'way behind the times. During the last few years cottons have proved they could be as warm for winter as they are cool for summer. They are now widely used for outdoor and indoor apparel all year round and have made themselves as much at home in the Arctic as in the Tropics.

When Admiral Byrd went on his Polar Expeditions he dressed his party in outer garments of closely woven cotton finished to make it protective against the elements. Ever since, water- and wind-repellent cottons of this type, known as Byrd Cloth, have been recognized as ideal for extremely cold weather.

The Army now uses cotton in layers to protect our Arctic soldiers, and explains that specially treated cotton cloth offers maximum resistance to wind and penetrating dampness without weighing down the wearer with a lot of heavy, unwieldy clothing. Dressed in cottons according to this "layering" principle, our ski troops have the freedom of action they need for mobility and military maneuvers.

These closely woven cotton poplins, gabardines, twills, etc., treated with the best of the water-repellent finishes were growing in popularity for civilian wear in winter sports clothes before the war, according to the Cotton-Textile Institute and the National Cotton Council. Some of the cotton sports jackets and wind-breakers are now favorites with men on outdoor war jobs as well as working in Victory Gardens during cool or inclement weather.

Reversible coats have made recent history. Some of the newest are made of lustrous cotton mixture twill, lined with cotton-backed pile fabric, and look like the sensational fur-lined coats. The twill is water-repellent and so this dress coat serves as an all-weather, all-purpose coat too.

In fact, most reversible coats are made so that at least one side serves for rainy weather. Some are treated corduroy on one side with water-repellent gabardine or poplin on other, while others show a tweed face to the world in sunny weather. Bright red and blue and green corduroys were used to line the school crowd's beloved fleece coats this fall, and the fleece itself is cotton-backed.

Nothing surpasses hollowcut velvet, plain velvet and wide wale cotton plush when it comes to glamor in dress coats. Pez jackets of the plush and hollowcut are wonderful all-rounders, warm enough for winter when they are interlined. One of the season's best sellers, the officer's coat,

IN MEDIEVAL TIMES MEN SOUGHT SECURITY BY BANDING THEMSELVES TOGETHER IN GUILDS WHICH LIMITED THE NUMBER OF WORKERS AND RESTRICTED THEIR ACTIVITIES AND BY PASSING THE HAT FOR THE RELIEF OF WIDOWS OR ORPHANS OF MEMBERS. THEY SACRIFICED FREEDOM AND HAD QUESTIONABLE SECURITY.

Spareribs: A Point Saving Sunday Dish

If your point budget has been failing to provide your family with its traditional roast on Sunday, Jessie Alice Cline, home economist, says that you can "beat the book" and keep within your allotted meat portions by serving a low-point roast occasionally. Any cut of lamb or pork is tender, so it is easy to understand that there are many low-point cuts from either of these meats that could be roasted. Because spareribs are so often barbecued or cooked by other moist heat methods, the possibility of roasting them may have been overlooked. Moist heat is frequently used for pork because it must be cooked well-done to develop fully its rich flavor. However, it is easy to roast pork to the well done stage and, as such, it is recognized as one of the most delicious roast meats.

Overall manufacturers report that WPB has allocated 33 million yards of denim to be furnished by the mills making these goods with each expected to furnish a portion. The denims are to be used for making Navy dungarees.

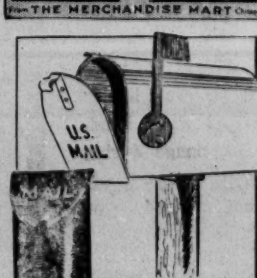

Roast Spareribs with Apple Stuffing
2 section spareribs
Apple stuffing
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
Spread inside of one section of spareribs with apple stuffing. Cover with the other section. Sow or skewer the two sections together. Sprinkle the outside with salt and pepper. Lay spareribs on a rack in an open roasting pan and roast in a moderate oven (350 deg.F.) for 1 1/2 hours, or until the meat is done. Remove the strings or skewers before serving.

Film Designer Features Cottons For The Stars

When it comes to creating modern fashions or period costumes, Edith Head does either with equal ease and skill. That's the reputation this petite and dynamic designer for Paramount has earned around the lot.

In an interview at Paramount Studios in Hollywood, Miss Head added her name to the roster of leading American designers who are speaking out for cottons in unique and glamorous fashions, in sturdy work garments, and in draperies, upholstery, and rugs in the home. She told a representative of the Cotton-Textile Institute and National Cotton Council that she has long been an admirer and user of cottons for moving picture costumes as well as in off-the-screen designs. "Because," she explained, "cotton has a crispness that shows up well in pictures. Then, too, cotton embodies youth, and everybody likes to look young, including movie stars!"

Among fashion people, Edith Head is outstanding for her smart, young clothes done with imagination. Childhood association with American Indians of the Southwest and with Mexico is reflected in her feeling for the simple in design and fabric, her dramatic color sense, and her leaning toward the primitive. An example of her expert handling of crisp, youthful cottons in the achievement of something starkly simple, yet supremely sophisticated is shown in the costumes she created for Mrs. Sidney P. Osborn, wife of the governor of Arizona, and her niece, Sydney Ann, to wear in a recent portrait study.

Mrs. Osborn's gown had a full skirt of black eyelet-embroidered pique in striking contrast to a white bodice, set off with a necklace band of the black motif applied around the shoulders in an off-the-shoulder effect. Little Sydney Ann's black pinafore was made to correspond, with a tiny blouse modeled after her aunt's.

Miss Head believes that cotton will grow in fashion importance because it fits into our functional styles of today and she thinks it particularly suitable for play clothes and sports clothes because it can be tubbed so easily and always emerges fresh and crisp. To back up her belief in its practicality, she has designed a matching raincoat, hat, and boots of water-repellent cotton gabardine for Rise Stevens in Paramount's "Going My Way."

Knitted cotton basque or tee shirts for men come in a variety of striped color combinations and a gingham effect. Easy to launder, comfortable to wear, they're grand for knockabout. For sports, plaid shirts of pure cotton in pastel shades are also destined for a big play.

SANTA has just about delivered the last gift; his work is almost done. If we have helped him by having the things you wanted, we shall be very happy. We hope and trust that your Christmas will be the happiest one you have ever known. Our best wishes!

SPEAKING OF HEALTH

By DR. VICTOR G. HEISER

Medical Consultant Nation Association of Manufacturers

Health on the Production Front.

Among the listed hazards of war-time production is TNT poisoning. To show industry's magnificent job in medicine and health engineering to protect the war worker, compare the records of this hazard during this war and the last.

In the first seven and a half months of World War I, there were 17,000 cases of TNT poisoning, with 475 deaths. In a much longer period of time in this war, only 475 cases and eight deaths were reported.

Rather peculiar temporary ailments arise as a result of the type of work required in the manufacture of war material.

"Angel eyes," for instance, is a new and not very widespread ailment due to excessive exposure to hypochlorite dust, which causes workers to see a halo around lights.

Metal fume fever, or "zinc shakes" as it is now called, occasionally afflicts welders and pinfitters who do not take the necessary precautions to avoid breathing in zinc oxide fumes.

When a worker gets such an affliction, his company goes into action to clear up his condition. But, most important of all, the precautionary measures taken to prevent just such an occurrence are reviewed to determine how the employees could have got such an affliction and to try to prevent its happening again.

Industry is waging a battle for the health of the worker that receives little publicity but which will be an ever-

Where Are Sheets Going?

Where do the sheets go? Well, an awful lot of them are in the Army, working for the Medical Corps, especially. Anyone who does the shopping for even a small family can appreciate somewhat the job of the Army Medical Supply Depot which acts as Uncle Sam's personal shopper. Uncle Sam's family consists of every man in the United States Army, and so his shopping list has to be long enough to take care of the more than seven million men now in service. And so it's easy to understand the huge number of sheets that must be on his shopping list.

Sheets, of course, says the Cotton-Textile Institute and the National Cotton Council, are just one of the 11,000 items made of cotton now serving the armed services in one way or another. Many of the other supplies handled by the Army Medical Supply Depot use the cottons which civilians have trouble in getting. But, after all, most people are glad to make sacrifices like this for our fighting men.

Many other household cottons are also in service. Terry and chuck towels, for instance, curtain net and marquisette (these mills are making mosquito netting), carpets and rugs (the mills are making tent duck), and twills and poplins going into uniforms.

Tiny "Power Package" Shows Prowess

A small but power-packed electric motor, heart of several ingenious adjustment systems designed for Uncle Sam's war planes, is opening and closing airplane trim tabs, adjusting cowl flaps, raising and lowering landing gear

Just 24 hours until Christmas! The kids faces are getting rounder and dad's getting longer.

This time of year, everybody starts loving a fat man—if he has a red coat and whiskers.

We're simply asking for it when we:

1. Cross a busy street (or any highway for that matter) without paying attention to traffic.
2. Use a couple of boxes in place of a ladder.
3. Leave firearms where children may find them or leaving loaded firearms at any time in the house.
4. Reach for any electrical connection while in the bathtub.
5. Leave things lying on stairs.
6. Use inflammable liquids for cleaning either in the shop or at home.
7. Run a motor in a closed garage.
8. Chip or grind without safety and performing other vital tasks aboard American fighters and bombers.

Eastern aviation engineers were shown the devices at the special invitation Lear Avia exhibit in New York.

Ranging in size down to a tiny motor that weighs less than 13 ounces and develops one-sixtieth horsepower at 9000 revolutions per minute, the motors are engineered with the precision of fine watches, and in combination with flexible shafts, ball-bearing screw-jacks and other precisely designed instruments, raise heavy landing gear or operate cowl flaps against tremendous wind pressure at the touch of a button.

The motors and adjustment systems have been developed and perfected since the outbreak of the war by Lear Avia engineers and are now being produced in quantities that spell bad news to the Axis.

"At Christmas play and make good cheer
For Christmas comes but once a year"

Glittering more fantastically than the jewels of Aladdin's cave are the Christmas trees in the homes of this town and adjoining farm areas. Everywhere, everywhere Christmas, and the spirit which Christmas brings.

We love this town and its environs. We have grown up here and have come to regard ourselves as "a fixture." We have a great many friends, "but not a friend to spare," and at this time we want to thank them, one and all.

YES, CHRISTMAS COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR, SO IT BEHOOVES US ALL TO MAKE THE VERY MOST OF IT. ON THE EVE OF THIS JOYOUS SEASON WE TAKE GREAT PLEASURE IN WISHING ALL OUR FRIENDS THE FULLEST MEASURE OF CHRISTMAS JOY AND HAPPINESS.
